Estate Planning and the Probate Lawyer: You May Be a Tax Return Preparer

By Neal Nusholtz and George W. Gregory

In 2011, Congress increased the penalty for each failure of a preparer to comply with due diligence requirements in preparing a tax return from $100 to $500.¹ This was after the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) paid billions of dollars in excess refunds, over $11 billion on the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC—a refundable credit for low income taxpayers) alone.² That penalty and others depend on who is a “tax return preparer.” If you think you are not a “tax return preparer,” or that you are only a “tax return preparer” when you prepare a tax return, read on, you will not like it, but you should know it.

Taxpayers cannot possibly cope with the complexity of our tax system. The solution is to shift the burden to professionals to implement the rules and police taxpayers who might try to get around the rules. There are many different examples of this type of burden being placed on tax return preparers. But while the government has made it harder to prepare a tax return, they have also made it easier to be tax preparer, by accident, as in the following example:

Prior to the sale of a $10 million business, an attorney outlines a plan of sale where the tax savings could be $1 million. The attorney charges for three hours of work. The following tax season, the client returns to the attorney’s office with a draft of his tax return. It shows the sale, and the client wants review and final approval. The attorney looks at it for ten minutes, sees the sale property reported, and gives the draft his approval.

Question: Is the attorney required to sign the tax return?

Answer: The attorney may be a signing the tax return as preparer of a tax return if he or she is primarily responsible “for the overall substantive accuracy of the preparation of such return.”³ The attorney will be a non-signing tax return preparer if: (1) someone else has final say on the return;⁴ (2) the advice given⁵ relates to items on the return that are “substantial;”⁶ and (3) at least 5 percent of the advice occurs after the pertinent facts have occurred.⁷ A substantial portion of the return is an item which is: (1) a “substantial portion of the tax” and (2) an item of gross income or a deduction of at least: (a) $10,000.00 or (b) $400,000 and at least 20 percent of the gross income on the return.⁸

Lawyers who are not even tax lawyers could inadvertently run afoul of the preparer rules. There are many rules (they are listed at length below). A good place to start would be a discussion about the differences between a signing return preparer and a non-signing return preparer.

Table of Differences Between Signing and Non-Signing Preparers

Topic	Signing Preparer	Non-Signing Preparer
Definition	"A signing tax return preparer is the individual tax return preparer who has the primary responsibility for the overall substantive accuracy of the preparation of such return or claim for refund."⁹	"A nonsigning tax return preparer is any tax return preparer who is not a signing tax return preparer but who prepares all or a substantial portion of a return or claim for refund within the meaning of paragraph (b)(3) of this section with respect to events that have occurred at the time the advice is rendered. In determining whether an individual is a non-signing tax return preparer, time spent on advice that is given after events have occurred that represents less than 5 percent of the aggregate time incurred by such individual with respect to the position(s) giving rise to the understatement shall not be taken into account. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, time spent on advice before the events have occurred will be taken into account if all facts and circumstances show that the position(s) giving rise to the understatement is primarily attributable to the advice, the advice was substantially given before events occurred primarily to avoid treating the person giving the advice as a tax return preparer, and the advice given before events occurred

		was confirmed after events had occurred for purposes of preparing a tax return. Examples of nonsigning tax return preparers are tax return preparers who provide advice (written or oral) to a taxpayer (or to another tax return preparer) when that advice leads to a position or entry that constitutes a substantial portion of the return within the meaning of paragraph (b)(3) of this section."¹⁰
Definition of "Substantial Portion"		"A person who renders tax advice on a position that is directly relevant to the determination of the existence, characterization, or amount of an entry on a return or claim for refund will be regarded as having prepared that entry. Whether a schedule, entry, or other portion of a return or claim for refund is a substantial portion is determined based upon whether the person knows or reasonably should know that the tax attributable to the schedule, entry, or other portion of a return or claim for refund is a substantial portion of the tax required to be shown on the return or claim for refund. A single tax entry

		may constitute a substantial portion of the tax required to be shown on a return."¹¹
Exceptions from Substantial Portion Rules		(1) Less than $10,000; or (2) Less than $400,000 and also less than 20 percent of the gross income as shown on the return or claim for refund (or, for an individual, the individual's adjusted gross income).¹²
Examples under Treas. Reg. §301.7701-15(b)(2):		Example 2. Attorney B, an attorney in a law firm, provides legal advice to a large corporate taxpayer regarding the tax consequences of a proposed corporate transaction. Based upon this advice, the corporate taxpayer enters into the transaction. Once the transaction is completed, the corporate taxpayer does not receive any additional advice from B with respect to the transaction. B did not provide advice with respect to events that have occurred and is not considered a tax return preparer. Example 3. The facts are the same as Example 2, except that Attorney B provides supplemental advice to the corporate

		taxpayer on a phone call after the transaction is completed. Attorney B did not provide advice before the corporate transaction occurred with the primary intent to avoid being treated as a tax return preparer. The time incurred on this supplemental advice by B represented less than 5 percent of the aggregate amount of time spent by B providing tax advice on the position. B is not considered a tax return preparer.¹³
Date Return is Deemed Prepared	Date signed, if unsigned, date filed.¹⁴	Date non-signing Preparer provides advice¹⁵
Obligation for Accuracy on the Return	"Primary Responsibility for the overall substantive Accuracy;"¹⁶ unless it is determined that the signing preparer is not responsible for the position and there is a non-signing tax preparer within the firm with overall supervisory responsibility for the position(s) giving rise to the understatement.¹⁷ A penalty may be assessed against a signing or non-signing preparer in the same firm but not both.¹⁸ Note that this rule does not apply to people in different firms.¹⁹	If "based upon credible information from any source, it is concluded that the signing tax return preparer is not primarily responsible for the position(s) on the return,"²⁰ a penalty may be assessed against a signing or non-signing preparer in the same firm but not both.²¹ Note that this rule does not apply to people in different firms.²²

Topic	Signing Preparer	Non-Signing Preparer
§6694 Penalty	The amount of penalties assessed against the individual and the firm shall not exceed 50 percent of the income derived (or to be derived) by the firm from the engagement of preparing the return or claim for refund or providing tax advice.... The portion of the total amount of the penalty assessed against the individual tax return preparer shall not exceed 50 percent of the individual's compensation as determined under paragraphs (f)(1) and (2) of this section.²³
§6694 Adequate Disclosure	From 8275 or 8275-R, disclosure under 1.6662-4(f), or if other than accuracy related penalties, contemporaneously documented advice to the taxpayer.²⁴	Disclosure on the Tax return the same as for a signing tax preparer²⁵ or if the advice is provided to a taxpayer "if the tax return preparer advises the taxpayer of any opportunity to avoid penalties under section 6662 that could apply to the position, if relevant, and of the standards for disclosure to the extent applicable. The tax return preparer must also contemporaneously document the advice in the tax return preparer's files."²⁶ If advice is provided to another tax preparer disclosure is adequate if the other tax return preparer [is advised] that disclosure under section 6694(a) may be required. The tax return preparer must also contemporaneously document the advice in the tax return preparer's files.²⁷

An attorney writes a tax opinion for a substantial item on a tax return for a company that has its own tax department and the tax department makes final decisions on tax matters. The practitioner must advise the client of the consequences as provided under the Internal Revenue Code and regulations of such noncompliance, error, or omission.

Circular 230 Section 10.21 Diligence as to Accuracy

§ 10.22 Diligence as to accuracy (a) In general. A practitioner must exercise due diligence in preparing or assisting in the preparation of, approving, and filing tax returns, documents, affidavits, and other papers relating to Internal Revenue Service matters.

Specific Rules Applying to Earned Income Tax Credit

Generally, four requirements must be met by return preparers to avoid a penalty under IRC 6695(g), which requires due diligence in the course of preparing tax returns with an earned income tax credit.

First, the tax preparer must complete either Form 8867 or its equivalent and complete an eligibility checklist based on information provided by the taxpayer for the tax preparer.

Second, the preparer must keep the EIC worksheet or equivalent that demonstrates how the EITC was computed. The preparer must keep either: (1) the Earned Income Credit Worksheet in the Form 1040 Instructions or (2) a record in the electronic files of the calculation, including the method and information used. The worksheet may be prepared based on information provided by the taxpayer, or otherwise reasonably obtained by the preparer.

Third, the preparer must not know or have reason to know, at the time of the preparation of the return, that any information used in determining the taxpayer's eligibility for, or the amount of, the EITC is incorrect, incomplete, or inconsistent. In satisfying this knowledge requirement, the taxpayer must also (1) not ignore the implications of information furnished or known; (2) make reasonable inquiries if a reasonable and well-informed tax return preparer, knowledgeable in the law, would conclude the information furnished appears to be incorrect, inconsistent or incomplete; and (3) document in his/her records any additional inquiries and responses made. Whenever a preparer knows or has reason to know that more than one taxpayer is seeking to claim the EIC for the same child, a penalty will be asserted if the preparer does not apply the tie breaker rules, which are: (1) between a parent and a non-parent; (2) if neither claimants are parents, the one with the higher Adjusted Gross Income; (3) if both claimants are parents who do not file jointly, the parent with whom the child lived longest during the year; and (4) if both parents are claimants and their time with the child is equal, the one with the higher adjusted gross income.

IRS Publication 4687 defines due diligence: IRS assesses most due diligence penalties for failure to comply with the knowledge requirement. To meet the knowledge requirement, you should:

- Apply a common sense standard to the information provided by your client.
- Evaluate whether the information is complete and gather any missing facts.
- Determine if the information is consistent; recognize contradictory statements and statements you know not to be true.
- Conduct a thorough, in-depth interview with every client, every year.
- Ask enough questions to reasonably know the return is correct and complete.
- Document in the file any questions you asked and your client's responses, as it happens.

If a return preparer receives conflicting information from two different taxpayers, the return preparer has an affirmative duty to request verification from both taxpayers to determine which information is correct and to only file a return with information the preparer does not know or have reason to know is incorrect (CCA 200029008).

Lastly, the due diligence requirements relating to record retention require that the preparer retain the Form 8867 (or its equivalent) and the EITC worksheet, maintain a record of how and when the information used to complete these forms was obtained, verify the identity of the person furnishing the information, and retain the records on paper or electronically for three years after the latest of:

- The due date of the tax return (determined without regard to any extension of time for filing);

- In the case of a signing tax return preparer electronically filing the tax return or claim for refund, the date the tax return or claim for refund was filed;
- In the case of a signing tax return preparer not electronically filing the tax return or claim for refund, the date the tax return or claim for refund was presented to the taxpayer for signature; or
- In the case of a nonsigning tax return preparer, the date the nonsigning tax return preparer submitted to the signing tax return preparer that portion of the tax return or claim for refund for which the nonsigning tax return preparer was responsible.

Exception to penalty. The section 6695(g) penalty will not be applied with respect to a particular tax return or claim for refund if the tax return preparer can demonstrate to the satisfaction of the IRS that, considering all the facts and circumstances, the tax return preparer's normal office procedures are reasonably designed and routinely followed to ensure compliance with the due diligence requirements of paragraph (b) of this section, and the failure to meet the due diligence requirements of paragraph (b) of this section with respect to the particular tax return or claim for refund was isolated and inadvertent. The preceding sentence does not apply to a firm that is subject to the penalty as a result of paragraph (c) of this section.³³

Manner of Assessment

Preparer penalties will be assessed in the same manner as taxes. Preparers subject to proposed penalties will be sent a 30-day Letter 1125 (Transmittal of Examination Report) and if a response to the 30-day letter is not made, the penalty will be assessed.³⁴ Preparer penalties will not be submitted to appeals if less than 180 days remain on the statute of limitation. A request for extension of the statute will be made, and if not granted, the penalty will be assessed.³⁵ Once assessed, the penalty must be paid and a claim for refund filed to obtain a hearing. Except in § 6694, § 6695, and § 6713 cases, if a hearing in appeals has not been previously granted, one will be granted on filing a claim for refund.³⁶ In § 6694, § 6695, and § 6713 cases, an appeals hearing will be granted even if the preparer was previously granted an appeals hearing pre-assessment.³⁷

Conclusion

Well, that covers the complete landscape of rules that apply to preparers, including people who might not think they are preparers. Once facts have occurred upon which tax advice is given, no simple rule of thumb exists that, if followed, will exempt anyone from the application of all of these rules. So, be prepared to be a preparer.
